3 The Convict Confined in the St Lockup at Chickmagalur (~~Chikmagalur~~) has a sentence of 3 months and is said to have been detained in the St Lockup as his appeal was pending decision. His case therefore directly falls under the order of the Dewan ~~on~~ 8/12 above.

4 Neither the official memo of the 3rd June nor the G.O. of the 12th Q. contemplated the submission of supplemental lists for remission of sentence. The remissions were granted as "one of the measures of celebrating the auspicious occasion of the marriage" and it is therefore a point for consideration whether it will be appropriate to grant remissions now recommended. But there is this fact in favour of the case - viz - that the prisoners were actually confined in the jail on the day of marriage when the releases and remissions were announced. Further the remissions will be given effect to only at the time of their release. No inconvenience will therefore be caused if they should be granted the remissions recommended which will still be in connection with the marriage festivities.

§ There is a precedent in connection with the Coronation Celebration of 1903 in regard to the Supplemental grant of remissions to prisoners who could not be included in the list owing to their ^{having been} ~~being~~ detained in at Lockups and to other causes. A Supplemental list was called for from the J. & remissions ^{were} granted.

A similar procedure will be adopted now if approved.

8 The prisoners that have now been recommended for the Concession are all short term prisoners - one year being the longest period of imprisonment awarded to any of them. It is no doubt an accident that these persons were convicted at a time when their names could not be sent up to Govt but this does not entitle them to ask for the Concession nor any more than the prisoners convicted just a day after the marriage would be entitled to ask for it.

~~It is if necessary to be pointed out that the Govt of India does not seem to desire that the prisoners should be asked for the Concession.~~

I do not quite see why these lists could not have been sent up earlier, (if they are required to be sent up) but the remissions seem to be clearly due to these prisoners & may be sanctioned, I think.
